The Birmingham-Hoover Metro is the largest population and economic region in the state of Alabama with a population of approximately 1.1 million. The metro area spans amongst five counties: Jefferson, Shelby, Blount, St. Clair, and Walker Counties. Nestled at the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains at the cross-section of two major railroads, the city was once the primary industrial center of the southern United States. At the height of the nation's manufacturing age, the city grew so fast in population, it was called the "Magic City." Today, Birmingham has transformed itself into a medical research, banking and service-based economy, making it one of the nation's most livable cities with a vibrant downtown, a burgeoning loft community, a world-class culinary scene and more green space per capita than any other city in the nation.

Birmingham Overview

Prime location with development opportunity and easy access

Birmingham is home to a dynamic and diverse economy, supported by a range of leading employers that contribute significantly to the city's growth and vitality. Among its largest employers, the University of Alabama at Birmingham (UAB) takes a prominent place, not only as a major educational institution but also as a key healthcare provider. UAB's renowned medical center, research facilities, and educational programs make it a critical driver of the city's economy. Additionally, Birmingham is known for its strong financial sector, with companies like Regions Financial Corporation headquartered here, offering a wide range of banking and financial services. Other notable employers include Alabama Power, a vital utility company, and Southern Company, one of the nation's largest electricity providers. These corporations, along with many others, not only provide a robust job market but also contribute to Birmingham's economic stability, making it an attractive city for both residents and businesses alike.
